

After the election...

MORE YEARS OF THATCHER: WHAT THEY MEAN

MRS. THATCHER won a third term of office at the general election on June 11th for two reasons: firstly, the paucity of the opposition; secondly, the massive propaganda offensive launched by the overwhelmingly pro-Tory press to hoodwink the voters into believing that the last 8 years of Thatcherism have actually been 'good for Britain'.

All that could be said in favour of voting Tory on June 11th was that the alternatives were even worse — well, just marginally worse. With Mr. Kinnock the captive of the lunatic left of his party, with its plans to make the country defenceless and its crazy antics in local government, Mrs. Thatcher was presented with a propaganda gift in election that she could hardly fail to exploit to her advantage. As for the parties of the 'Alliance', they were so obviously led by political lightweights and their policies were so mushy and flabby that they scarcely presented any serious challenge. All that the Alliance offers, behind its slogans about 'radical change', is a mish-mash of the worst doctrines of the other two parties, almost all of which have been put to the test and failed under previous Tory and Labour governments.

The big razzamatazz of the Tory election campaign was just a great 'con' from start to finish, aimed at kidding the public that the Thatcher government was something totally different from what it really is and making claims of grandiose 'achievements' that in fact have not been achievements at all.

LIE ABOUT THE ECONOMY

Take the propaganda about the national economy. The Tory publicity machine was all orchestrated to put across the gigantic lie that the economy is now 'recovering', and to back this up the claim was made that Britain's economic growth is now the 'fastest in Europe'. Of course this claim was arrived at by taking the figures of percentage growth — that is growth in proportion to the condition the economy was in at the start of a given year. By this yardstick, any pauper economy can be made to show better growth figures than a prosperous one. Take a tramp who is down to his last 50p piece. If he persuades someone to let him wash their car and earns £1 for it, he can be said to have succeeded, in a single hour or less, in achieving an economic growth of 200 per-cent! Just what does that tell us about his real economic condition?

British national production is currently about 65 per-cent that of France and a mere 40 per-cent that of West Germany — two countries of similar size of population. Of course it should not be difficult for us to make our economy grow at a figure that is a larger portion of that 65 per-cent or 40 per-cent than the French or German growth is as a portion of their total production! The whole claim is just a juggling with figures.

INDUSTRIAL DESERT

The truth is that Thatcherism has made of Britain an industrial desert. Just a little bit of water added to that desert will add up to an impressive percentage increase in the total water available there. If our figures of production have recently gone up a bit, it is only because they were at such a low level that they could hardly sink any lower.

Another big confidence-trick has been the Tory claim that Labour's defence policies would leave Britain with no independent nuclear deterrent. The true fact is that we scarcely have any independent nuclear deterrent now. Most of this 'independent' deterrent consists of Cruise and Polaris missiles, both supplied by America. The Cruise missiles are operated by American forces in operation of Britain and could not be used except by the consent of the US President. Polaris, while nominally under British control, is nevertheless American-made. It is due to be replaced, at enormous expense, by another American-made missile system, Trident. This hardly adds up to 'independence'.

CRIME UP

During the recent election the Tories made many rousing speeches about 'law and order', but the fact is that since Mrs. Thatcher came to power in 1979 the crime rate has dramatically increased — to the point at which there were 4,311,000 crimes throughout the country last year, and with a clear-up rate of only 32 per-cent. During the time of the Thatcher Government there have been some of the most ferocious riots ever seen in Britain. On the evidence of police officers close to the scene of these riots, they occurred because of the policy of 'softly-softly' policing as recommended in the Scarman Report, commissioned by the Thatcher Government.

ANOTHER TERM

Jubilation as the Prime Minister hears of her election victory

It is scarcely any secret that these disorders occurred in areas of high immigrant concentration and mainly involved members of racial minority groups, particularly young West Indians. Great numbers of people expected that immigration would be an important issue in the recent election, but in the outcome it was barely mentioned at all. It almost seems as if there was an unwritten agreement between all the parties to exclude it from the election debate.

TWO NATIONS

On thing the election highlighted more than ever before, and this is that Britain is becoming, increasingly, two nations — the largely jobless regions of the North of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, as well as many parts of the Midlands, being like a world apart from the prosperous and smug South East. In one TV debate it became clear that the Tories are quite happy to see this tendency continue, government supporters saying that people without jobs in the north should move south if they wanted to get them. The logical outcome of this attitude is that before long Britain will become, north of a line stretching from East Anglia to the Severn Estuary, a barren wasteland, while south of that line people will

RACE AND IMMIGRATION

Excerpts from the Thatcher manifesto

"...We want to see members of the ethnic minorities assuming positions of leadership alongside their fellow citizens and accepting their full share of responsibility. Racial discrimination is an injustice and can have no place in a tolerant and civilised society. We are particularly concerned about racial attacks. They require effective and sympathetic attention from the police and we have ensured that increasingly they receive it.

"...Immigrant communities have already shown that it is possible to play an effective and influential role in the mainstream of British life without losing one's distinctive cultural traditions. We also want to see all ethnic minorities participating fully in British culture. They will suffer permanent disadvantage if they remain in linguistic and cultural ghettos."

The above is part of what was said in the Tories' 1987 election manifesto on 'Immigration and Race Relations'. This, bear it in mind, is from the party whose leader won many votes in the 1979 election by pledging that she would not allow the country to be 'swamped' with immigrants. Note the statement that the ethnic minorities should not lose their 'distinctive cultural traditions', followed immediately by the assertion that they should be 'participating fully in British culture'. If this is not facing both ways at once, what is?

MORE HAND-OUTS FOR THE 'THIRD WORLD'

Tory policy on overseas aid

"We have the sixth largest aid programme in the western world, and the third largest in Europe, spending about £1,300 million each year...We have led the way in giving help to the people of Ethiopia, ravaged by famine..."

"We ourselves have made positive and practical proposals for international action to help some of the poorest and most indebted countries of sub-Saharan Africa."

"Labour's proposal of selective import controls would damage developing countries, open the door to protectionism and harm those poorest countries which most need our help...The best contribution Britain can make to developing countries is to champion open trade and free enterprise abroad and to practise them at home."

So the Tories want to lavish more hard-earned British money on people remote from our shores, just at a time when they are telling us that numerous vital public services in this country must be curtailed because of the need to make 'economies'. Apparently, there is quite enough for Africa and Asia, while elderly British folk have to continue to go cold in winter and lack adequate medical care.

DEFENCE CUTS

...despite attacks on Labour for the same thing

"The first duty of government is the defence of the realm and the preservation of peace..."

"Only the Conservative Party stands by the defence policy which every post-war government has seen to be necessary and which has kept the peace of Europe for more than a generation. We are not prepared to take risks with Britain's security."

FACT: During the last period of Tory Government there have been big cuts in defence, with particularly bad effects on the Royal Navy which were felt in the Falklands War. Despite the lessons of that war, the cuts have continued. Now the Navy has considerably less ships than it had when Mrs. Thatcher first came to power in 1979.

THE MEDIA: POWER WITHOUT RESPONSIBILITY

THE BRITISH PEOPLE have recently been allowed once again to exercise their so-called 'democratic rights' in a farcical general election dominated by the usual three political groups, all of which are fundamentally at one in their commitment to a set of political attitudes grounded in internationalism, multi-racialism and general national softness and wetness — whatever differences of opinion may exist between them on matters of detail.

Despite the virtual unanimity of all these major parties on every issue of real importance, the people have once again been 'conned' into believing that, by the exercise of their votes, it is THEY who decide how the country is to be governed for the next few years!

The reality is that under our 'liberal democracy' the people as a whole have little real say in anything. In fact they live under what is effectively a DICTATORSHIP, and one that is, unlike some others, irresponsible because largely anonymous and unseen — a dictatorship of powerful vested interests which alone have the clout to sway governments. It is these vested interests, not themselves in any way subject to the control of any popular vote, which determine, both at elections and at other times, whether any particular matter will be treated as of public importance or whether it will be pushed out of sight. It is these vested interests which in fact determine what the voter will actually be allowed to vote on.

Among these interests are to be included: the money power of the City of London; the trade unions, the left-liberal elements dominating the academic world and the church; and certain racial minority lobbies. But the one interest above all without which the 'establishment' could not preserve its domination over the British people is without doubt the mass media.

It is the media which set the whole climate of public opinion and, to a large extent, the values by which our people live.

Media control is in the hands of a privileged, self-perpetuating oligarchy, comprising both the owners and the leading opinion-formers of press and broadcasting, an oligarchy intimately associated with the international financial fraternity which would be the main beneficiary from the destruction of Britain's nationhood.

This self-appointed minority sees to it that, as far as possible, the type of nation-destroying attitudes described monopolise all the channels of mass communication, so that any other point of view — particularly a national and patriotic one based on white racial consciousness and loyalty, is crowded out.

The British people have an instinctive wish for strong government that will undertake a grand programme of reconstruction in the long-term national interest. The media have a vital role to play in this. Clearly they are a power that can have a vast effect in making or breaking the morale and will of a nation to survive. In the wrong hands, as at present, they can and will bring Britain to ruin. In the right hands, they can be a great national resource. It is the plain duty of national leadership to bring this sectional interest to heel and, if need be, compel it to function for the good of Britain.

The Tory record on race- -Humbug -Cowardice -Surrender

IN THE RECENT GENERAL ELECTION the Tories made a great song and dance of their opposition to the more blatantly extreme and fanatical 'Black Power' elements associated with the militant left wing of the Labour Party. They went out of their way to play up the activities of such figures as Bernie Grant, Linda Bellos and Sharon Atkin, albeit that it has been during the past 8 years of Tory rule that these people have had such a field day.

It was the Tories who met the 1981 inner city riots with the fatuous Scarman Report, with its emphasis on soft policing — in practice meaning virtually no policing at all — in areas of our cities deemed 'racially sensitive'. It is the Tories who have presided over the explosion of inner city crime, which has now reached the point where such areas have degenerated into an almost uninhabitable nightmare. In has been the Tories, in government, who have stood back and done nothing as there developed the climate leading to the worst rioting ever seen in mainland Britain, including the Tottenham riot in 1985 that led to the hacking to death of PC Keith Blakelock by a crazed mob — a climate in which, along with other denizens of this section of the leftist political underworld, the likes of Bernie Grant could emerge triumphantly to proclaim that the Tottenham rioters had given the police a "bloody good hiding" and in which such a creature could thereby become a celebrity and his political career made.

To cap their record of weakness and betrayal, it was the Tories who, with a series of prosecutions during 1985 and 1986 under the infamous race acts, launched the greatest wave of political repression so far against the genuine opponents of Britain's inner city mayhem by imprisoning nationalists for publishing the truth about it.

SUPPRESSION OF TRUTH

Throughout their period in office, it has been the policy of Mrs. Thatcher's Tories to lie to the British people, suppressing the truth of what was going on in Britain's big cities whilst doing nothing about it whatsoever. It was only with the approach of the 1987 general election that they suddenly 'discovered' what they have chosen to call the 'loony left', including in particular the Labour Party's 'black sections'. Going on their past record, it is clear that their only interest in banging the drum on this issue, with its racial overtones, was to catch votes from a British electorate prepared to clutch at straws in the face of what they sense to be a dire menace to the nation's future. This is a ploy also seized upon by their rivals of the Alliance parties, including the failed one-time Labourites at the head of the SDP, who have not been slow in exploiting it in order to cage former 'moderate' Labour votes in many inner city constituencies.

In actual fact, as should be obvious, neither the Tories nor the Alliance, who vied with them for the same section of the popular vote by sounding off on the subject of Labour's black militants, have either the ability or the will to put an end to this phenomenon. These 'Black Power' elements have emerged as an inevitable result of the creation of multi-racial conditions in this country, and will only disappear along with the disappearance of those conditions. But the Tories, just like the left-liberal Alliance, are fully committed to multi-racialism and have not the slightest intention of reversing Britain's transformation into a 'multi-racial society', a process set in motion from the first by stealth without the British people ever having been consulted in the matter by any of their 'democratic' rulers.

Far from wishing to end the multi-racial experiment, Tory spokesmen and the Tory press give as their reasons for opposing the Labour Party's 'Black Power' lobby that the latter is 'racist'. The black militants, many Tories are saying, will have the effect of separating the races, impeding the process of 'racial integration' so dear to Tory hearts.

TORY HUMBUG

The Tories' entire propaganda line on this issue is, as is usual with the poses they choose to adopt on race at election time, pure cynical humbug. On the one hand, they try to win the votes of an apprehensive British electorate by talking about a 'Black Power' threat which has grown to its present proportions under their own rule, while on the other hand all they have to offer in practice as a supposed 'alternative' is more multi-racialism — the very conditions under which the black militants have been thriving!

It may be remembered how former Bradford headmaster Ray Honeyford found to his cost the futility of proposing racial integration as some kind of 'alternative' to the strident demands for power of black militant elements. Mr. Honeyford was systematically hounded for many months by a marxist-dominated 'anti-racist' mob in that heavily multi-racial city, with its very large Asian population, because he had expressed the view that white children suffered educationally in schools numerically dominated by non-Whites. It did not help him in the least that he wholeheartedly subscribed to the view that non-Whites should be fully integrated into British society and went out of his way to say so, nor that his remarks on the education of white children were really no more than a mild plea for 'fair play'.

The 'anti-racist' militants could not be appeased and eventually they drove Honeyford to resign after violently demonstrating outside his

MIXING UP THE POLICE
This Asian WPC is just another example of present government policy of encouraging more 'ethnics' into the police forces. This of course is playing into the hands of the black extremists school. Against the stark reality of multi-racial conditions such as those prevailing in Bradford, this kind of appeal was altogether without effect. In such conditions, it is in the end the militant 'anti-racists', with their clear-eyed fanaticism based on a coherent ideology, who are going to win every time!

Given these conditions, the establishment always weakly caves in. During Honeyford's persecution, no public figure or politician, locally or nationally, of Tory, Labour, Alliance or any other affiliation, would stand up to give him support. Above all, Mrs. Thatcher and her ministers emitted from Westminster an almost deafening silence! No doubt, among other considerations, the government feared the loss of 'ethnic' votes.

Honeyford himself seems in no way to have learnt his lesson. He has in fact written a recent article in The Daily Mail, a Tory-leaning paper which has spared no effort of late to promote the idea of racial integration as an 'alternative' to race-based militancy, in which he supports the notion of child-adoption across racial lines.

In fact by helping to promote Britain's degeneration into a multi-ethnic melting pot, in which her original stock would disappear forever, such integrationist policies as this could only serve to hasten the ultimate disaster which marxist 'anti-racist' militants are seeking to bring upon us.

The Tories have no stomach to deal with these problems, as they have proved over the past 8 years. There can only be peace and harmony if Britain is restored as an ethnically homogeneous white nation. Only those who fight politically, in an open and honest way, for this aim can ever be considered Britain's true champions.

THE TORY PRESCRIPTION FOR THE 'NEW BRITAIN'
This picture appeared with an article by Ray Honeyford in the 'Daily Mail', illustrating the idea of white families adopting more coloured children. In fact the more mixed and 'integrated' Britain's population becomes the more black militants will thrive

THE COLLAPSE OF LAW AND ORDER: CAUSES AND CURES

BEHIND the current collapse of law and order in Britain is the regime of weakness and surrender to mob violence which the old party politicians and their allies of the police and judicial establishment have allowed to become a settled norm. Criminal and anti-social elements of all kinds have not been slow to see through and exploit such weakness.

One of the most scandalous signs of this spinelessness, and perhaps the one that has been the most decisive in creating the breach in Britain's rotting social fabric, was recently highlighted by no less an establishment figure than former Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Kenneth Newman.

In a recent Sunday Express article Sir

Spelled out establishment policy in black areas

Kenneth came close to admitting outright that special methods of policing had to be used in dealing with crime among black people, by comparison with those employed when the criminals are white. This is of course a matter of common knowledge and observation among dwellers in the inner cities, but is seldom spelt out so openly by prominent establishment figures.

AVOIDING RIOTS

The main factor determining this 'reverse discrimination' in policing methods is implied strongly by Sir Kenneth as being the need to avoid a riot. In his words: "No-one will entertain the fancy that we can enforce the law in Brixton or Tottenham in the same style and manner that we use in Hampstead or Finchley...The difference lies between an area where almost all the people are friendly and supportive, and where the most trivial incident can detonate an explosion."

ALTERATION

Sir Kenneth ascribes the alleged 'need' for the change in policing policy to the drastic alteration that has taken place in the society that has to be policed. Even at the end of World War II, he says, Britain was "a relatively homogeneous society. By historical standards quite suddenly, we have become a multi-ethnic, multi-cultural country." As a result of this change, Sir Kenneth says that a situation has arisen in many parts of the country

THE SCENE AT TOTTENHAM: OCTOBER 1985
The legacy of the government's 'softly-softly' policing policy where police can no longer count on finding a community that is on their side.

POLICE FRUSTRATED

The efforts of police to enforce the law in many inner city districts are liable to be frustrated by major public disorder — or at least the continuous threat of such — if they dare to carry out any arrests.

Whilst accurately identifying the politicians, by implication, as those responsible for creating this impossible environment in which police have to function, Sir Kenneth does not stand up and propose the commonsense remedy.

THE RATIONAL COURSE

Clearly, under a rational and genuinely patriotic government, policing would be beefed up in the inner cities so as to make both law-enforcement and peace-keeping equally possible, pending the termination of the 'multi-ethnic, multi-cultural' conditions to which Sir Kenneth has referred. Of course, neither the establishment as a whole nor any of the political parties of the old gang that are its mouthpieces are remotely prepared to contemplate such solutions. On the contrary, they are determined to impose multi-racialism at all costs.

DISINTEGRATION

Meanwhile, without these necessary measures — which only nationalists will ever implement — Britain will continue to disintegrate as a recognisable national community, capable of thinking and acting as a unit in defence of the common good of all its law-abiding citizens.

MANIFESTO FOR THE REVIVAL OF BRITAIN

SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT

The old system of party warfare must come to an end, and all political forces within the nation must be co-ordinated together in a mighty effort of national reconstruction. Nationalism will bring this about by achieving a synthesis of what is best in conservatism and radical reform, in private and state enterprise, in authority and freedom.

THE ECONOMY

We will create full employment by means of economic nationalism. Britain will not import from foreign countries what she has the skills and resources to produce at home. British manufacturing industry will be protected from foreign competition in the home market by an import embargo which will eventually cover almost all manufactured goods. Our deprived regions will be restored to prosperity by the revival, where practical, of old industries catering for an enclosed home market and by the building of new industries almost from scratch to replace imports.

In this endeavour, private enterprise will be encouraged when useful but will work within a strict framework of national regulation laid down by government. Capitalists will be made to operate as the servants of the economy, not its masters.

All British industries and resources presently under foreign ownership will be brought under British ownership.

FINANCE

Finance, likewise, will be the servant and not the master of the economy.

The City of London will cease to be a market for the unregulated movement of money about the world and will become a power house for oiling the wheels of British industry, with investment controlled for this purpose by the action of government.

We shall dispense with the 'fractional reserve' lending rights enjoyed by the privately-owned banks and will require that no banks lend money in excess of their actual deposits. All monetary expansion will be undertaken by a national and government-controlled bank by means of a debt-free issue to finance public expenditure, and will be geared to the rate of real national economic growth.

TAXATION

The aforementioned practice will gradually reduce public indebtedness to zero and will, in this way, eliminate the burden on the taxpayer of paying interest on public debts. This will make possible an enormous reduction of taxes.

EUROPE

We will take Britain out of the European Common Market and encourage the reform of the European Community into one of free and sovereign nations, not bound by any central bureaucracy or standardisation of rules, but co-operating simply when mutually advantageous.

THE COMMONWEALTH

The Commonwealth will be reformed from a multi-racial association into one comprised purely of white members. Our non-white ex-colonies will be required to leave and go their own way, taking their people with them. Meanwhile we will do everything to bring about closer ties with the old dominions. In our overseas trade we will give firm preferences to the produce of our White Commonwealth partners.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

We will bring about a total transformation in the system of industrial relations in Britain by the merging of employers' and employees' organisations into single corporations representing all productive forces in the respective industries, with one single corporation for each industry. These corporations will be national bodies and not affiliated to any political party. All their funds will be used strictly for the promotion of the welfare of their members.

LAW AND ORDER

We will restore capital punishment and establish statutory minimum sentences for certain particularly evil crimes, including rape, child molestation and extreme violence against the person. We will ensure that excessively soft judges and magistrates are dismissed from the bench. We will, where necessary, expand prison facilities, while at the same time making prisons, once again, places of real punishment to which the criminal will not wish to return.

We will see to it that all police forces are adequately manned and equipped and that they enforce the law with complete impartiality, with the same criteria applying in all areas and with all sections of the population. There will be no police 'no-go' areas. Nowhere will we allow police investigation of offenders or apprehension of suspected criminals to be hampered by fears of the outbreak of disorder.

Where large-scale outbreaks of disorder do occur, they will be dealt with by means of overwhelming force and complete ruthlessness, tempered only where the safety of law-abiding people in the vicinity may be at risk.

RACE AND IMMIGRATION

We intend to end the multi-racial experiment and make Britain once again a racially homogeneous country, populated by people of British or kindred European stock.

All further non-white immigration will be terminated and all members of non-white ethnic groups will be resettled overseas by arrangement with the countries concerned in which Britain will use its overseas aid programme as a leverage. All these resettled persons will be required to leave Britain only when jobs and homes have been secured for them in their countries of destination, and when they leave they will have their fares paid and an additional resettlement grant provided by government.

THE INNER CITIES

We are pledged to revive and clean up Britain's inner cities by means of the creation of full employment and, where necessary, the provision of special government grants. Unlike the other parties, however, we believe that no help to these inner cities can be effective unless these areas are settled by people of the type able to sustain prosperous and law-abiding communities and a high quality of life.

EDUCATION

We intend to restore the highest standards in education for all our children. All schools in Britain will be subject to certain national standards and rules aimed at eliminating low-grade teachers, indiscipline and shoddy academic methods. Emphasis in education will be particularly on those skills and sciences needed to maintain Britain's position in the modern world. The teaching of patriotism and civic duties will be a major part of the school curriculum. We will also ensure that all schools have first-class facilities for sport and physical recreation, with much more resources given to these fields in the way of priorities.

We believe that a basic rule of education must be that pupils differ in be standing almost shoulder-to-shoulder and with hardly any open spaces or green fields left. What a legacy from those who claim to lead a 'national party'!

In international affairs, the Tories have made much of the principle of "standing by our friends around the world" but the reality is quite different. The present government has done everything possible to undermine South Africa, which is a valuable trade customer and an old ally of Britain, while running to appease Soviet Russia. The government is one of the parties to the EEC policy of selling off Community food surpluses to the Soviets at knock-down rates, which simply enable the latter to use the money saved to spend on bigger armaments and on financing subversion around the world.

This is the Tory record behind all the brave talk of "halting Britain's decline." In fact the Thatcher Government has been one of the most appalling in our history, and it is no defence of it to say that a Labour or Alliance government might have been even worse.

So this is what we have got to look forward to now that we have got 5 or so more years of Mrs. Thatcher. It is a dismal prospect: continued massive unemployment; more crime and violence; increasing race problems; further inner city decay; rotten schools and inadequate health services; a dirty, scruffy, dilapidated country, lacking hope; finally, a continued policy overseas of kicking our friends in the teeth while sucking up to our enemies.

The election confirmed the truth of what we have said for years: that the Tories have no real policies for bringing about the recovery of Britain, while none of the other major parties at Westminster offers any better alternative.

The only way out of the present mess is to build an entirely new political movement right from the grass roots, based on entirely new and different principles. This is the way forward that we offer in the British National Party. It is the only way to national salvation.

YOUR LETTERS

Sir, — I have read recently that 55,400 immigrants came to settle in 1985, 51,000 in 1984 and 53,000 the previous year.

On 12th January 1952 Rabbi Rabinovich, speaking to an assembly in Budapest, Hungary, said:-

"We will openly reveal our identity with the races of Asia and Africa. I can state with assurance that the last generation of white children is now being born. Our control commission will, in the interests of peace and the wiping out of inter-racial tensions, forbid the Whites to mate with Whites."

"The White Woman must cohabit with members of the dark races, the White Man with Black Women. Thus the White Race will disappear, for mixing dark with white means the end of the White Man, and our most dangerous enemy will become only a memory."

"We shall embark upon an era of ten thousand years of peace and plenty, the [redacted] and [redacted] will rule indisputed over the world. Our [redacted] will enable us to retain mastery over a world of dark peoples."

Sir, — Austin-Rover are to be commended for giving their latest car, the Sterling, a British name. After the Metro, the Montego, the Cortina, the Granada, the Fiesta, the Toledo, the Camargue and others, this is a very welcome change. Let's hope that other motor manufacturers follow suit.

Nearly a don!

This is Rastafarian 'poet' Benjamin Obadiah Zephaniah, whose education was largely in Zephaniah, school and board. Very recently he was nearly made a don at Trinity College, Cambridge. Only by a narrow decision of university seniors did another candidate get the position.

A sample of Mr. Zephaniah's poetry runs like this:-

The day dat I met Lady Di, I was happy no I tell a lie. I had a pain in my belly, I would not fart near royalty.

Are we not wrong in thinking that a great deal of insanity must reign at a university where a creature like this was even considered for such a post?

Clergy speak out for gays

Bless 'em all

CLERGYMEN have banded together to support gay rights.

Representatives of leading churches in Lewisham, Hither Green, Deptford and New Cross have pledged support for our call for Justice for All.

The clerics, who represent Anglican, Catholic, Methodist and United Churches, have issued a joint statement agreeing with our stand on equality for everyone — regardless of whether they are black or white, male or female, gay or straight. They have taken the decision to stand up and be counted by backing our headline viewpoint — published three weeks ago — that Lewisham Council is right to have a policy of non-discrimination against gays and lesbians in all fields — including housing, employment, fostering and the adoption of kids.

Their statement comes as a bitter blow to members of the Forest Hill-based Ichthus Christian Fellowship which has leafleted homes calling for Lewisham Council to abandon its policy of equal treatment for gays.

Opposing Ichthus, the churches declare:

"Many Christians and church leaders have been very distressed at the insensitive and judgemental position taken by a minority of Christian leaders in their condemnation of the homosexual lifestyle, in a leaflet produced mainly by the fundamentalist Ichthus Christian Fellowship."

And their statement goes on:

"Such a public rallying by these few

'We are not called to our christian ministry to judge but to serve' churches against homosexuals can only serve to make the gay and lesbian communities feel even more isolated and more distrustful of society in general and the Church in particular. However, at the very worst they give respectability and justification to the prejudice and intolerance from which many homosexuals suffer, and fuel the fear, hate and violence often directed against them.

"Instead, we feel that we ought to follow Jesus' teaching and example of love, reconciliation and compassion, since we are not called to our Christian ministry to judge, but to serve those amongst whom God has given us the privilege to live and work."

"We do not withhold this ministry to anyone on the grounds of sexuality any

We reprint here the front page of the LEWISHAM & CATFORD MERCURY, a South London local paper. The issue in question appeared on the 2nd of April this year. The headlines speak for themselves.

The accompanying article goes on to point out the overwhelming support given by the local clergy to what the paper calls 'gay rights'.

Could any clearer example be given of the complete degeneration of today's Christian churches? There was a time once when these churches were the leaders in the maintenance of high moral standards in the nation. Not any more. Nowdays, the churches — with a tiny few exceptions among their clergy — have lined themselves up with everything in the nation's life that is decadent, obscene and subversive.

Nationalist Alliance formed

LAST MONTH an agreement was drawn up and approved between the leadership of the British National Party and the ruling committee of the National Front Support Group whereby the two organisations would form a working alliance in an effort to reduce rivalry and duplication between them. British Nationalist feels this is a most constructive development in the progress of nationalists in this country towards greater unity.

The National Front Support Group must not be confused with the other National Front, headed by Mr. Nick Griffin, which is not a party to this agreement. The NFSG was one of the two factions into which the National Front split in 1986, and it publishes The Flag newspaper and Vanguard magazine.

The formation of this alliance is the result of several months of liaison between BNP Northern England

Chairman Stanley Clayton-Garnett and Mr. Andrew Brons of the NFSG. At a meeting in Leeds in May John Tyndall of the BNP met Mr. Brons for the first time in 7 years and the two discussed the terms of the alliance. Also present were Mr. Clayton-Garnett and Andrew Oxley of the BNP. Following this meeting, Mr. Brons presented its recommendations to the NFSG Steering Committee, by which body they were approved. The arrangements for the conduct of the alliance will be as follows:-

(1) The two organisations will for the time being maintain their own separate identities and continue to function under their respective leaderships and in accordance with their own internal rules. They will, however, collaborate in certain fields.

(2) The alliance will be run by a special Liaison Committee, which will meet regularly, as well as being in close telephone contact. The Liaison Committee will be the co-ordinating body in those areas in which the two parties will co-operate. The Chairman of the Liaison Committee will be Stanley Clayton-Garnett of the BNP and the Deputy Chairman will be Joe Pearce of the NFSG. Other members will be: David Bruce, Richard Edmonds and John Morse (BNP) and Andrew Brons, Stephen Brady and Michael Harris (NFSG).

(3) The specific areas marked down for immediate collaboration will be:-

(a) The two parties will jointly organise certain major activities, such as rallies, marches and large-scale public demonstrations.

(b) The two parties will form a 'free market' for the mutual exchange of each other's publications. Under this arrangement, BNP branches will be authorised to buy for display and sale at meetings publications of the NFSG and vice-versa.

(c) The two parties will form an electoral pact under which there will be close liaison in the choice of areas where candidates will be put up in elections and with a view to there being no electoral clash in which the candidate of one party is opposed by the candidate of the other.

(4) The two parties will both undertake not to attempt to 'poach' each other's members or branches — though this arrangement will be without prejudice to the right of one party to accept unsolicited applications to join by individual members or units of another.

The BNP leadership wishes to make it clear that its agreement to this alliance should not be taken to imply that it has in any way 'changed heart' on any of the issues over which it has made a strong stand in the controversies with other nationalist groups over the past years, only that such a working arrangement as has just been drawn up has always been regarded by the BNP as a goal to be pursued in preference to the factional strife that has torn nationalism apart in recent years. Naturally it is hoped that the closer contact between the two bodies that this alliance will make possible will permit a friendlier exchange of views on the matters over which there has in the past been disagreement, leading hopefully to a better understanding by others of the BNP point of view. Needless to say, this understanding of others' point of view should be a two-way thing.

It is naturally hoped that, if the two parties to this working alliance can make a success of it, other nationalist factions may be induced to see the wisdom of coming together with them under the same umbrella, thus greatly expanding the combined resources at our disposal and the range of projects on which there can be common action.

Doncaster NFSG unit joins us

WE ARE very pleased this month to be able to welcome to the party ranks the former Doncaster branch of the National Front Support Group, which voted at a meeting on June 8th to cross over to the British National Party. The meeting was addressed by two BNP representatives, Andrew Oxley and John Wood.

Doncaster has been one of the best of the NF branches in recent years and its addition to the BNP strength in South Yorkshire will certainly be of great benefit to the party in that area.

We look forward very much to working with these new colleagues in the near future in building up the strength of nationalism in S. Yorks.

their natural attributes and that those who have the potential to achieve excellence should not be held back by adherence to abstract theories of 'equality'.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland must remain British for all time. The Anglo-Irish Agreement must be scrapped and there must be no further bargaining over the province's future with the Irish republic.

The IRA and other anti-British terrorist bodies in the province must be ruthlessly pursued and destroyed by all means necessary.

DEFENCE

Britain must possess a nuclear deterrent that is truly independent, that is manufactured in Britain and controlled by the British Government and manned by British forces.

American forces must be removed from British soil and replaced by expanded and strengthened British forces.

We should restore national service as an obligatory institution for all young men.

OVERSEAS AID

Our overseas aid programme should be cancelled except where it is useful as a lever to negotiate arrangements with Third World countries for the resettlement of Britain's ethnic minorities — and then should be continued only for as long as the process of resettlement makes necessary. All the money saved should be allocated to helping people in need in Britain.

BRITAIN AND THE WORLD

Britain's foreign policy should be based on a businesslike and realistic calculation of the national interest, and should in no way be determined by our like or dislike of other nations' internal politics.

While we hold friendly feelings towards the majority of American people, we believe it essential to terminate Britain's present subservience to America in world affairs.

We believe that in the Middle East Britain should withdraw its support from Israel and do everything possible to cultivate the friendship of the Arab nations.

Likewise, we should recognise South Africa as a friend and ally and do everything possible to restore good relations with her.

Britain should withdraw from the United Nations and all other international bodies that are comprised largely of her enemies and which attempt to intrude upon the sovereignty of our own nation and other nations.
